NOTES [1] VCSSA is a joint agency of the state of Vermont and the United States Department of Agriculture. Its mission is to develop and promote the sustainable use of agricultural land in Vermont. [2] The Board of Review of the Bureau of Labor and Industry oversees the Vermont unemployment compensation fund and acts as an appeals board for the Bureau. [3] The Department conceded at oral argument before this Court that the ALJ's decision is not consistent with § 60(C)(8), which allows for a two-month delay of wage and insurance payments. While this fact is beyond the scope of our review, we note that the Department's answer to the petition for review filed in this Court did not include this issue, but rather complained that the Board of Review exceeded its authority. We agree that the Board of Review exceeded its authority when it imposed the 30-day delay, but disagree that this issue is properly before us. The Department first raised this issue before the Board, which considered it and, in a cursory fashion, rejected the Department's contention. The Board held that it "lacks the jurisdiction to grant additional time to the Department to pay past-due benefits and enter the appropriate monthly payments," thus its decision must be upheld. Rather than argue before the Board that it should not have decided this issue, the Department now asks this Court to review the Board's decision for error. We decline to do so. In any event, in accordance with our decision in Currier v. Corning, 153 Vt. 473, 474-75, 571 A.2d 633, 634 (1990), the Department acknowledges that § 60(C)(8) could be read to authorize a two-month delay of wage and insurance payments. Nonetheless,
